FOR THE GAZETTE.

EXTRACTS FROM THE JOURNAL OF A VOYAGE TO THE MEDITERRANEAN.

Chapter IV.

"Where now ye lying vanities of life,
Ye ever tempting, ever cheating train!
Where are ye now?"

THOMPSON.

Where are ye?—Not in the angry waves that lash our little bark, nor in those surly clouds that menace in the horizon. All here is reality---the works of God alone are seen, unembellished by art and unadorned by fancy. The sun—the only object I could recognise, seemed now my only friend; his beams, spread over the foaming billow, illumined the agitated surface, and gave it a thousand varied hues.

We were now in what is called the Gulph stream, which is a current that rises in the gulph of Mexico and sets along the coast in a Northerly direction, deviating gradually to the Eastward until its whole course forms the segment of a circle, which extends nearly to the Azore or Western Islands, where it is lost. Vessels bound from Europe to America, generally run to the Northward of the gulph, to avoid its current which is against them, but in going to Europe they frequently take advantage of it. Navigators ascertain when they are in the gulph by the temperature of the water, which is much warmer than the ocean near it, and increases in heat as you approach towards its centre. There is also a strong current which when opposed or crossed by the wind causes an irregular bubbling sea; in fact, it appears at all times to be in a state of agitation, either from adverse currents within itself, or from the continual squalls of wind to which it is subject. I leave it to philosophers to account for the phenomenon—the fact is certain, that an entirely different climate prevails in the gulph stream from that which is experienced in the ocean near it. From the moment of entering it, the horizon is constantly obscured with thick clouds, and heavy squalls of wind and rain follow each other in quick succession. This was now the kind of weather that we experienced, and our only compensation was, that it was carrying us fast toward our destined port.

Aug. 13. During the next four days we met with no incidents worth recording except those common to our situation. We were now completely in the Squall manufactory, as the sailors term the gulph stream, and if variety is pleasing, we ought certainly to have been highly gratified. At one moment the sky was obscured with black and heavy clouds, in the next they were dissipated by a brilliant sun, and a gentle breeze, which were as soon succeeded by a tremenduous gust of wind or a heavy shower of rain. The squalls generally came from the northward and westward, and it was not uncommon to have five or six of them in an hour. Besides this we had other inconveniences to suffer;—the Enterprise, besides being very deeply laden, is what is termed a very wet vessel, and ships a great deal of water over the decks; so that besides the constant rain, we had the water ancle-deep on the deck from the commencement of the voyage. This was peculiarly disagreeable, as it obliged us either to remain below in a small hot ward-room, of which the smell was by no means agreeable, or to stand on deck with our feet in the water and with the spray continually dashing over us. I was never in a much more disagreeable situation; but it was still harder for the men, and I was much amused to overhear the serio-comic manner in which they bewailed their hard fate.—"I wish" said one "that my master had sold vinegar and had kept me at home to bottle it off!" "If ever I get back" said another "I'll ship for soldier aboard of some fort!" They little thought that the difficulties which they complain of are trifles, compared with the hardships and deprivations to which the soldier is subject. If the romances of Dibdin, which have turned the brains of half the world, were exploded, there would be found to be as little real danger or hardship at sea as in almost any other situation in life. The sailor who receives his regular allowance of grog and provision, and who when his watch is over, can turn in to a dry hammock, is a nabob compared with the soldier, who after marching all day must frequently starve all night; and who must often put up with the cold ground for his bed, with little other covering than the "curtain of night"—of which the poets speak—but which in my opinion is but a flimsy kind of drapery.

There is perhaps no species of music which has ever excited so much enthusiasm as what are termed sea-songs. There is a fascination in these compositions, arising out of the strange medley which they exhibit, of noble sentiment, blunt honesty, fine feeling, and low humour—boldness of metaphor and technical quaintness. The scene, too, where the fiction is laid, is admirably calculated to display the powers of the poet, and to excite the feelings of the hearer.---"The angry aspect of the raging deep," and the "brooding terrors of the storm," have afforded more fine allusions than any other object in creation. Thus the seamen has become identified with the element on which he rides, and is only seen, by the poet's eye, when sitting calmly aloft enveloped in darkness, or plunging fearlessly through the foaming billow. In this way, these gentlemen, having all that is "awfully vast" at their command, can make up a very pretty story: the dangers, which the visions of fancy, and the dreams of ignorance and imbecility have suggested; the bravery—the careless self-devoted bravery—with which those dangers are said to be surmounted; and above all the munificent generosity with which the wealth earned by such exertions is disposed of: are all minutely detailed. But still the picture is not complete without the mellow tints of Love---and our hero must have a sweet heart. The parting scene is depicted as full of tender emotion, suppressed anguish, and manly fortitude. Then we see Jack rocked on the billow, heaving the deep drawn sigh, or dashing a tear from his cheek as he thinks of his home, his friends, or his faithful Sue. During his voyage he is encompassed by many dangers by which "his valour, skill, and worth," become "renowned," and at length returns home loaded with riches; and now "wounded tars share his wealth,"—his fidelity to his mistress, his generosity to his friends, and his openness to all, are displayed, and to complete the sum total of his happiness, he pours his guineas into his mistress' lap, and the kind soul, consents to receive himself there also.

All this is very pretty as a fiction, but when a lie has been told over and over, it begins at last to be received as truth; and we are told of the blunt honesty and generosity of a sailor, until we believe that it is so---while in fact there is no class of men who less deserve those epithets. A drunken sailor just returned from a long voyage with his pocket full of money, is profuse,---not from liberality of heart, but because he scarcely knows whether he puts his hand in his pocket or his hat. Others feel vain of the character they have acquired, and throw their money away, to prove their title to it.

How different is the reality! At sea the sailor is a mere slave; habituated to bear the harshest and most ignominious treatment with apathy---he toils careless of the curses or commendations of his captain, and sleeps unconscious of having heard them. Separated from the wholesome restraints of society, custom, and even law, and accustomed to the lowest scenes of dissipation and impiety, their minds become callous to the feelings of honour or honesty and almost dead to the ties of nature.---What can we expect from uneducated men without pride, law, or religion, and exposed to the worst examples? An "old sailor" is considered as a privileged person; he is at liberty to cheat whom he can, and his villanies are all called "man of war tricks." He will rob his messmate of the only shirt he has in the world---plunder a dying companion—or arrest the last morsel from his lips, and if detected will answer "Sir I'm an old sailor!" His life at sea is one round of sleep and slavery, and on shore, of intoxication and indolence; and in old age he boasts of the profusion which has reduced him to poverty, exults in the follies that have ruined, and the vices that degrade him.

These remarks apply only to the mere sailor; among the navy officers and in that respectable class of citizens commonly called sea captains, are many gentlemen of intelligence, information and liberal ideas.

FOR THE GAZETTE.

Mr. Editor—In looking over one of your papers which accidentally came in my way this morning, I notice a "Letter from Winchester (Ken.)" in which the writer has poured forth his applause very profusely on a speech delivered by Mr. Bledsoe in a case of seduction. I have never been a great admirer of Kentucky eloquence, which has always appeared to me as little better than that of Counsellor Phillips himself; and from the very resolute style of puffing adopted by the letter-writer I am quite content to be spared a sight of the oration. In sober sadness sir, it is a cause of alarm to witness the progress which a vitious taste is making through our country. What with Phillips on one side, and Kentucky on the other, the minds of our youth are actually between two fires, and it is the duty of a good citizen to throw cold water on the flame as expeditiously as possible, This is peculiarly the business of the reviewers, who may be fancifully considered, the ancient and honorable company of Hosemen, having at command the streams of learning and taste. As they seem however not over and above alert in the performance of their duty, I for one feel very much disposed to seize a bucket and dash it myself. Unfortunately the letter-writer in question has confined himself to mere general encomiums, so that it is difficult to bring their justice to the test: yet even in the 'last words' of Mr. Bledsoe, which are given to us by his zealous eulogist, I think I can point out to you a want of taste and professional skill. The orator finished, it seems, by quoting the beautiful lines which Goldsmith puts in the mouth of Olivia after her abandonment by Thornhill. Now what reflection would naturally be excited by this, in the mind of an intelligent juryman? He learns that in the days of Goldsmith, before the value of female honor had become a matter of calculation, a frail woman's

"——only art her guilt to cover,
To hide her shame from every eye,
To give repentance to her lover,
And wring his bosom ——

was—what? "to die." But this decrease of population is not the policy of a new country, and a lady's remedy now a days for all the calamities enumerated by the poet is not to die but to bring her action for damages. Oh most lame and impotent conclusion! There is no hanging with garters in the case; the lady is only kept in suspense by the tardy process of the law. When the jury, by the recitation of these verses, were prepared to hear that the forsaken damsel had committed the sin of self slaughter, and mayhap that her clay-cold corpse had been refused christian burial by some 'churlish priest,' lo! they are only to assess damages on the gay deceiver---the vile Lothario of our Western wilds. "Drown thyself?" as Iago says to the despondent Roderigo; "Drown thyself? drown cats and blind puppies! put money in thy purse—put money in thy purse!"

What think you Mr. Editor of the great frequency of actions for seduction and crim con? In England, I am told they are quite matters of speculation at the present time, when the ordinary objects of enterprize are exhausted. A man gravely calculates whether after paying counsel fees he can nett a handsome sum by a pretty wife or a pretty daughter, who has not been able to resist the urgency of a pretty man. Like old Boniface they complain that a wife grows useless at 25, and remind one of Juvenal's representation of a husband taking a very opportune nap after dinner, while a rich lover was with his lady, but suddenly rousing when he saw a poor man attempt to dally with her, exclaimed "non omnibus dormio" I dont sleep for every body's convenience,

For my own part, I have always very much questioned the policy of awarding heavy damages to the victims of seduction. It is only to female virtue and female modesty that we are to look for a barrier to licentiousness in private life. To punish violations of these, is the only mode of checking the unruly passions in the ardor of youthful excitement. To a woman, the preservation of chastity is natural and easy, because her reputation in the world, and her happiness through life must be forfeited by an imputation on her character. With a young man, on the contrary the case is widely different. Public opinion however unwisely, makes an allowance for him; he is suffered to run his career of dissipation, and at length to settle down, as the phrase is, into a sober good citizen. The companions of his youth too, so far from applauding his self possession and reserve, would probably make him the object of their ridicule were he not to meet, more than half way the desires of a female. It is deeply to be regretted that such feelings should prevail, but while men remain as they are, the severest penalties will never be able to correct the public opinion to any great extent.

We should therefore attempt something more practicable. We must come in aid of popular sentiment, and not exhaust ourselves in a vain endeavor to counteract it. This, I conceive, can be best effected by closing up to a woman every prospect of advantage to be derived from the surrender of her virtue. Public opinion and public manners will here assist us.

Let no woman receive a reward for having so far forgotten the decorum of her sex as to throw herself into the arms of a libertine. Let the ears of a jury be closed to her, & depend upon it, the interests of virtue will be promoted. By awarding heavy damages, a great temptation is held out to females, particularly to those in the inferior classes of society. In the struggle which passes in the mind of a girl she will reason with herself thus: "Why should I not gratify this instictive passion which nature has implanted in my constitution? I am not more guilty in a moral point of view in so doing, than the men who wish to keep us from enjoyments which they freely indulge in. What need I care for the sentiments of the world when I shall be independent of it. A court of justice will always be at hand to extort a sum of money from my lover if he should desert me. While I yield to passion I secure a future provision which will enable me to taste, more than I have hitherto done, of the luxuries of the world. Part of this money I may even employ in making my parents comfortable in their old age, when incapable of supporting themselves." The influence which reflections like these may have on a mind tottering from the impulses of an ardent temperament, is a subject of very serious consideration. My own persuasions on this subject are so strong, that I would never as a juryman, calculate the price of prostitution or assess the reward which a female deserves for having offended against religion and the modesty of her sex.

I have to apologize for having drawn out these hasty reflections to such length.

Shutter Fasteners.

A constant supply wholesale and retail, may be had on application to the Agents,
HUGHES & TOMKINS,
At their Hardware Store No. 150, Market street Baltimore.

THE Patentees recommend (with a confidence strengthened by the approbation of many respectable Architects and others) this new, neat and useful Fastener; and feel no hesitation in authorising their agents to assure all such purchasers (if any) as shall not find the article to answer their just expectations on applying it to use, that the money will be promptly returned on a similar return of the Fasteners.

It has decidedly an advantage over the former method of window fastening: being incomparably more elegant, affording greater security to the window when closed, and by its certainty of self-acting, securing back the shutter when pushed open or blown back by the wind, and is cheaper and better than the old method

 To those of the trade who purchase to sell again, the usual liberal discount will be allowed. The establishment is in its infancy, and with limited capital—therefore all orders must be accompanied with the cash.

Valuable Real estate for sale.

PURSUANT to the last Will and Testament of the late Col. Richard Brown, deceased I NOW OFFER FOR SALE,

The Farm on which he resided,
On the Ohio River, in Holliday's Cove, in Brooke County, Virginia.

This Estate consists of about 700 Acres of Land, 250 of which is a rich Island, the remainder principally second bottom and upland; that part of the upland which is not tiliable, is covered with timber suitable for furnishing the Island and tillable part with fencing and building timber. There is between 150 and 200 acres cleared and under cultivation, a suitable proportion of which is good meadow land. The buildings consist of two log dwelling houses and a log barn with under story of stone. It is well supplied with very fine springs of good water.

The situation of this property on the Ohio River, five miles from the flourishing Town of Steubenville, and in the neighbourhood of several Merchant Mills, Iron Works, &c. renders it a desirable object to a person who would wish to farm extensively, as he would probably at all times find a good market at his door for the produce of his farm. A part of the purchase will be required in hand, and for the remainder a reasonable credit will be given.

BEZ. WELLS, Executor.
Steubenville, 5th July, 1816.

PITTSBURGH.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 5817.

We observe it stated in some of the pa-ers, that several n rthern workmen had ade application at Washington city, to employed in making furniture for the esident's house, and that they had been med, that the articles referred to were procured from France—which infor- came under the insinuation of a ge against the President, of anti-nation- and impolitic partialities. We suppose at most people are now quite callous to is sort of cant, and sufficiently aware of e state of arts on the one hand, of foreign predilections among us on the her, to judge of the motives that could duce such a charge, admitting it to be e in its extent, which is more than we ieve. If the President's house were intended for the dwelling of a gentle- but made a kind of Columbian muse- like the patent office—a repository of imens to show the exuberance of our us and the present poverty of our skill, ght then have been expedient to have itted a parcel of the notions of our in- ous northern artists. It is anti-na- al to have the President shaved with ingham razors and Windsor soap, and provident to buy German chandeliers French looking glasses, because similar icle- nearly as good, could be made in s country for ten times the money. It never been our fortune to meet with a gle disinterested individual, who was posed to countenance republican simpli- y and encourage domestic manufactures excessive domestic expenditure.

Importing Company.—It is stated in the timore Patriot of the 25th ult. that, a y large meeting of the principal Traders Baltimore was held agreeably to an invi- ion in the public papers, to consider the priety and feasibility of establishing a pany for the purpose of importing ds from every part of Europe. Gen. UEL SMITH was called to the chair, J. W. M'CULLOH, Esq. appointed retary. Resolutions were adopted for rying this grand project into effect; and committee of twenty-five persons was pointed to make the necessary arrange- ents for the formation of the company d to report their proceedings to a subse- ent meeting. The capital of the company three millions of dollars, and its es- lishment is contemplated for twenty rs.

A letter from New-Orleans of the 28th received in New-York, states, that the er in that city was abating among the ericans, but that the Creoles still suffer by its ravages. The most exhorbitant rges have been exacted for services ren- ed the unhappy victims of this fatal mal- y. Attendance was charged at the ex avagant rate of $9 a day---$25 for a ugh, unplained coffin---and $8 for the use the hearse. These excessive extortions e a disgrace to humanity.

The Sinking Fund.—The Secretary of United States Treasury, has given offi- notice, that the commissioners of the king Fund have determined "that the visions of the act entitled 'An act to vide for the redemption of the public t,' should be carried into effect as far the same might be practicable; and that, pursuance of the said resolution, Rich- Smith, Cashier of the Office of Discount Deposit at Washington, has been ap- nted agent, under the superintendance the Secretary of the Treasury, to make rchases of stock of the United States, hin the limits prescribed by law; and whom all persons desirous of dis- ing of their stock will make applica- n."

GRAND LIBEL ACTION.

It is known that the Duke of Wellington, order to check the falsehoods and licen- iousness of the Belgian Press, instituted a against M. De Busscher, the editor of rent paper, for a libel; he having assert- that his Grace exercised so much in- ence in the Court of France, that any at- pts to obtain the removal of M. Dubuc, fendant of Martinique, would be ineffec- al; or words to this effect. The first court ve a verdict against the Editor, and he s fined 10,000 florins, and costs. He ppealed from this judgment, and the Su- eme Court reversed the verdict of the wer court, acquitted the defendant, and st the Duke in costs; but refused to give e defendant his costs. The Court of Ap- al contended, that as the publication did t charge the Duke with any immoral con- uct, or with having taken improper meas- es to acquire influence, it was not libel- us; and that the high deeds, eminent alities and true glory of the Duke, placed m above the reach of all suspicion of un- rthy motives and, the shafts of ambiguous d equivocal allegations. The friends of a e press in Belgium view this judgment as triumph.

From the Albany Register.

The Case of A. Kesler.

The facts detailed in the following are highly interesting. The information is de- rived from a source which may be relied on. On trials of this nature, too much caution cannot be observed in weighing the testi- mony which is to decide the fate of a fel- low being. At the late court of Oyer and Terminer held in and for Schoharie county, Kesler was sentenced to be executed on the 17th inst. for the murder of his wife. We think the case exhibits some extraordinary features.

It appears that Kesler's wife fell sick on the road from home—that he administered some medicines to her which he said he had procured from a neighbouring physi- cian—& that, after languishing some days, she died and was buried. Two months af- ter her decease, her body was disinterred & examined by some eminent physicians; and their opinion being unfavourable to Kesler, he was apprehended, tried and convicted—they agreeing in sentiment, that arsenick had been administered to her—a full and detailed report of the case was made to the Governor by the Judge who presided at the trial. The Governor trans- mitted this report to the distinguished Pro- fessor of Chymistry in the University: and requested his opinion on the scientifick part of the testimony. In consequence of this request, a long and learned communi- cation was made, declaring in substance, that the only infallible experiments to de- tect the existence of arsenick had not been adopted by the Physicians, and that the tests applied, were in no respect conclu- sive.

In addition to this, the foreman of the jury who found Kesler guilty, made a rep- resentation to the Governor, stating that the Jury deliberated three hours before they convicted Kesler, and they acted un- der an impression that his case would be reviewed by the Legislature.

A similar case has recently occurred in G. Britain, wherein Mr. Brand, of the Royal Institution testified against the sufficiency of a test adopted to detect poison, and which had been used on this occasion

It was also understood that Kesler, with- out any hope or expectation of relief, has uniformly asserted his innocence.

In order then that this subject may have a full examination, and that the scientifick part of the testimony may be fully elucida- ted and distinctly understood for the go- vernment of our courts and juries in an- alogous cases, the Governor has, with the advice of the eminent Jurists, consid- ered it proper to suspend the execution of Kesler, until the meeting of the Legisla- ture.

From the Richmond Compiler.

A Letter from a gentleman in London to his friend in this city, gives the follow ing interesting information—

"A ship is just about to sail from Ports- mouth, for South America, with Lord Cochrane, Sir Robert Wilson and 30,000 stand of arms on board for the Patriots. This is publicly known.

THE CHRISTIAN EMPEROR.

The Emperor ALEXANDER appears to be as much a practical believer of the Gospel, as he is an open professor of the Principles of the religion of the Saviour. We think the following recent fact will corroborate the hypothesis:—

One of the French literati lately sent to the Emperor a manuscript containing some unpublished letters and orthographs of Vol- taire, Delille de Salles, and other contem- poraneous persons. The Emperor was in- dignant at this circumstance, and ordered his Ambassador in Paris, the Count CAPO D'ISTRIA, to inform the donor that the work in question was not accepted, & to express to him his surprise "that he should have prejudged his opinions with respect to the individual whom the do- nor was pleased to call "the Patriarch of the authors of the age;" especially as the principles professed by that writer have never received his (Alexander's) approba- tion."

The philosophers of the day have taken the above rebuff of the Emperor in high dudgeon; but a letter of one of them con- tains the following paragraph in which it is attempted, ineffectually, to shew that their idol, Voltaire, was not the object of the believing Emperor's reprobation:—

"It is evident that M. Delille de Sal- les is here spoken of under the name of the "Patriarch of the authors of this age;" and whose first writings, above all, are, in some measure lessons of atheism. In this respect every enlightened Sovereign ought to condemn the author and his works. The reprobation expressed in the above letter could not have been extended to Voltaire, who, by his "History of Russia under Peter the Great," first, of all our writers, awakened the admiration of the ci- vilized nations of Europe at the progress of infant Russia."

The Esquimaux.—This singular charac- ter, whose dexterous achievements produ- ced such a sensation in the public mind about twelve months ago, has again return- ed to Leith with Captain Newton. Upon revisiting his native country, he learned with much sorrow that his sister, who lov- ed him with the most unfeigned affection, thinking he was dead, had died of a broken heart. During his residence at the island, the natives were continually flocking around him, and would sit for hours to- gether, listening with the greatest aston- ishment while he would relate, in his na- tive simplicity, the wonders he had wit- nessed in this country—He proved of great utility during the ship's stay in the Straits, and among other desperate exploits which he performed in his canoe, was the killing of a unicorn, the horn of which is now in the possession of Mr. S. W. Scriven of this city, the surgeon of the vessel.

20 Dollars Reward.

RAN AWAY from the subscriber, living in the borough of Lancaster, on Sunday the 5th instant, an apprentice to the cabinet business, named between 18 and 19 years of age, about 5 feet 5 inches high, slim made, light complexion, walks a little stiff in one of his ancles, not recollected which, occasioned by a burn, which has left a large scar; speaks broken German but tolerably good English. It is conjectured, that he has taken the direction of Pittsburg. The above reward will be given if secured in the most convenient jail in Pennsylvania from the spot where he is caught, and information given to me, so that I can get him again.

JOHN CHRIST.

Lancaster, October 12——3t.

NEW SCHOOL.

ON MONDAY the 3d day of November next, the subscriber purposes opening, at the house lately occupied by Mr. Campbell, in Irwin Alley, a SCHOOL for the Education of Children of both sexes, in those branches usually taught in an English Seminary.

The experience of upwards of forty years, and his reputation as a Teacher, in Hagerstown, (Md.) Lancaster and Chambersburgh, (Pa.) induces the subscriber to believe himself qualified to perform the duties he undertakes.

Children from the country will be accommodated with boarding, &c. in the family of the Teacher, on as low terms as the state of the Market will afford. JOHN RIDDLE.

Terms, plan and method of tuition &c. will be made known at the School room.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 24th

Patent Trace Chain.

THE subscriber has invented and obtained a patent for cutting and bending links to make chain of different sizes

Chain made of those links will have a superior advantage over the chain made in the common way as the iron is first drawn into a wire which makes each link of an equal thickness and more beautiful and strong than the common chain.

To the wholesale merchant they will be sold at 21 doll. per dozen. The links will likewise be sold to blacksmiths or others at 23 dolls per hundrod pounds with the necessary complement of rings, each chain requires six pound of links.

Orders accompanied with the cash will be promptly attended to by the subscriber at his works adjoining Pittsburgh.
